Charleston hit $98 four separate times

A fare that keeps coming back is worth more to an audience than a one-off, because someone who misses it gets another chance.

Why this isn't just another cheap-flights feed

GRADED AGAINST ITS OWN ROUTE

$98 to Charleston and $575 to Rome aren't comparable numbers. Every fare is measured against what that specific route normally costs, so a genuinely unusual price is obvious and an ordinary one doesn't get dressed up as a deal.

BUILT FOR RICHMOND ONLY

Every fare departs RIC. Nothing here asks your audience to drive to Dulles or Baltimore first, which is what makes it immediately usable for people who live here.

About these numbers. 255 fares observed and graded between August 17 and October 19, 2026. Each is a real fare seen on the date listed; airfare moves, so prices are accurate as of that date, not today. 64 days is a real sample but not a seasonal one. Fare-level data available on request.
